Key take-aways

A large majority of EU citizens believe the EU should play a more important role to protect them and face global challenges. To do so, they believe the EU should primarily focus on defense and security, as well as competitiveness and the economy.

The key issues to be addressed by the EP are inflation and the cost of living, and defense and security. Fight against poverty and support for the economy are also important. Finally, the most important values the EP should defend are peace, and democracy.

Just about nine in ten EU citizens agree that the EU Member States should be more united to face global challenges, this opinion being shared by at least three quarters of respondents in all countries.

Overall, EU and EP support indicators continue to be at high levels. At 62%, the proportion of EU citizens who want the EP to play a more important role reaches its second highest level.

What's more, the proportion of respondents recognising that their country has benefited from membership reaches its highest level ever (in more than 40 years). Among these benefits, the EU's contribution to protecting peace and strengthening security stands out as the most frequently cited.
